1. Introduction: Where We Begin

CLAYTON FUNK

Begin Here

Creativity: Privilege or Human Right?

To create means to produce an action or an artifact, but how does this creation occur? A student of religion might refer to "divine creation" as making something from nothing. But when humans create something, we usually consider the term scientifically, changing the state of a material or an idea, or making something from something. The artifact is the sum and substance of what you sensed and the decisions made during the process of making it. Depending on any limitations and/or controversy in this process, you may feel free to do what you want or you could be concerned about what others will think of it. When each maker finishes their processes and reveals their creations, they may place them in a public setting where they are open to critique and things can get competitive or even political, so even though one who makes an artifact or a song may feel they have the right to create whatever they want, they still have to answer to their critics. We can boil these dynamics down to three considerations: which forms are most important, who decides this, and who decides who gets access?

Wikimedia Commons

1) What Visual and Musical Forms are Most Important?

Most of us tend to associate visual and musical forms with varying degrees of power and social status. Walk in to most any art museum or concert hall and you might think you had entered a temple. Many museums were built in the U.S. during what Harpers Magazine called "the Museum Boom," in the 1880s. They were designed specifically to house art forms that were considered works of genius. Most refined Anglo-Americans believed that studying these fine art forms would inspire what they considered "good character," but mainly for that privileged, elite class of people. Such visual forms as painting and sculpture were regarded as "high art" and the same social privileges were associated with classical forms of European music. In fact many scholars and artists considered these visual and musical forms to be elite because they derived from their ancient heritage. They were sanctioned by European aristocracy and the predominant Christian denominations, which were regarded as the bedrocks of ordered European civilization at that time. In contrast, these Europeans disregarded the visual and musical forms produced by the indigenous groups, already in North America before the Europeans arrived, as products of cultures they termed "savage."

This compartmentalizing of art and music by social class and cultural differences may not sound relevant for our time, but remnants of these prejudices are still embedded in American cultural history. The significance of the visual and musical forms of one genre or another depends on which cultural group they come from. Some still consider the visual and musical forms of American Indians or African Americans as different, or even less than the works done according to European "classical" traditions. Even in the 1950s, traditional White parents tended to regard jazz and blues music created by African Americans as improper for their daughters and sons to hear. The creators of elite cultural hierarchies positioned Classical European forms in museums and concert halls as higher and better forms.

2) Who Decides Which of these Forms are Important?

The hierarchies of visual and musical forms are usually backed by the professional expertise of scholars and critics, whose opinions are often regarded with merit because of their advanced knowledge. Ours is a culture of professionalism where experts have an elite body of

"Barhee"". The authors are Mahmood S. Hashem, Abdulminam H. Ali, and Majid A. Ibrahim. The article is published in AAB Bioflux 10(2):57-62. The abstract states: "The aim of the study was to determine the effect of the extract of extracellular products of cyanobacteria Oscillatoria tenuis as an alternative or complementary component of the MS medium prepared for the date palm Phoenix dactylifera shoot proliferation growing by in vitro culture. The results shows that the medium supplemented with a half-strength of MS salts and the extract of cyanobacteria extracellular products (CEP) gave significantly increase of the percentage response to shoot proliferation and rooting, number of shoot, primary and secondary root, fresh and dry weight of shoot and root, total chlorophyll content, N%, phosphorus and potassium content compared with other two treatments. But this treatment gave the lowest value in shoot length. Also the results indicate that the medium supplemented with the full strength of MS salts recorded the lowest values in the percentage response to shoot proliferation and shoot length, fresh and dry weight of shoot, total chlorophyll content, N% and phosphorus content. But the medium supplemented with the cyanobacteria extracellular products (CEP) extract gave the lowest value in number of shoots. While this treatment

The screenshot shows the homepage of the Networked Digital Library of Theses and Dissertations (NDLTD). The URL is www.ndltd.org. The page features a navigation menu with links for News, Videos, Community, Thesis Resources, and Global ETD Search. A search bar is located in the top right corner. The main content area includes a sidebar with "About", "Contact Us", "Community", and "Membership" sections. The central focus is an announcement: "Registration is now open for the ETD 2018 Symposium." Below this is a graphic for "ETD 2018 Taiwan" and a "Welcome" message. The text describes the 21st International Symposium on Electronic Theses & Dissertations, held from September 26-28, 2018, at the National Central Library, Taiwan. It mentions that the conference is initiated by NDLTD and hosted by the National Central Library, with support from the Library Association of the Republic of China (LAC) and the Interlibrary Cooperation Association (ILCA). The text concludes by stating that ETD 2018 will provide excellent educational opportunities for professionals from graduate schools, libraries, academic computing, and others who work with electronic theses and dissertations (ETDs), institutional repositories, graduate students and scholarly communications. The goal is to offer relevant, practice-oriented content to support ETD productivity improvement, advance ETD operations and encourage the formation of regional ETD associations and networking communities as well as to provide useful and innovative resources, standards, and technology for the development

Welcome to Delnet
DELNET was started at the India International Centre Library in January 1988 and was registered as a society in 1992. It was initially supported by the National Information System for Science and Technology (NISSAT), Department of Scientific and Industrial Research, Government of India. It was subsequently supported by the National Informatics Centre, Department of Information Technology, Ministry of Communications and Information Technology, Government of India and the Ministry of Culture, Government of India.
DELNET has been established with the prime objective of promoting resource sharing

• How to access Delnet Online,

DELNET wants its Member-Libraries which are more than 4000 in number to make best use of its online resources. In order to facilitate efficient and effective searching of information through the various online databases and union catalogues of DELNET, this brochure has been prepared. It provides stepwise instructions and the necessary procedures. This will help the user in making the search pinpointed and specific so that relevant and desired information is retrieved fast.

DELNET information resources are bibliographic and full-text in nature. DELNET provides the delivery of physical books through Inter Library Loan as and when required by Member-Libraries and photocopies of journal articles that are published in Indian and foreign journals through its Document Delivery Services. Besides the ILL fee, the libraries have to pay for Courier/Post and photocopying charges against each transaction. The Member-Libraries can send the list of bibliographical references of books/journal articles either online or through E-mail. You can reach us through E-mail at: sangs@delnet.ren.nic.in, sangskaul2003@yahoo.co.in

How To Search?

Step 1
Go to DELNET Website at www.delnet.nic.in

Step 2
Click onto DELNET ONLINE option.

Step 3
A new Web page appears which prompts you to extra spaces or incorrect spellings can stop your access further.

Step 4
Click onto START button which appears on the same page. Just wait for a few seconds to get the authentication done.

Step 5
A new Web page appears showing linkages to DELNET Databases. On the left hand frame, you get the abbreviations of the Participating Libraries who have contributed the records to various databases. This is a pointer for giving the full name of the Institutions wherein the material (Books, Journals, etc.) are physically available. These abbreviations are being represented in the Location Code/Library Holdings of the various records in the databases.

Step 6
FOR SEARCHING BOOK CATALOGUES, JOURNALS, ETC.
If you want to search for any specific book, kindly double click the Union Catalogue of Books. This database currently has bibliographic information of more than 1.2 Crore books. These books are available in different Member-Libraries all across the country and outside India also. The database size of these Union Catalogues grows with each passing day since more and more records of Member-Libraries are being merged into the system on a daily basis.

Step 7
As you click the Union Catalogue of Books, a

also be used between the various fields for narrowing down the search hits.

Example : Let us assume that you want to search for books on "Electrical Engineering". You are requested to type "Electrical Engineering" in the space provided against Title Box. In order to ensure that both the words "Electrical" and "Engineering" appear in the title of each searched record, you have to ensure that you have selected "contains all" from the following five options in the title search: "contains all", "contains in order", "contains the phrase", "contains any", "includes". In the search results you will find that the words: "Electrical" and "Engineering" will be present in any order. But if you want "Electrical Engineering" to be present in the search results in the same order, i.e. "Electrical Engineering", then select the option "contains in order". If you choose the EXACT PHRASE option then the system will look out for the exact appearance of Electrical Engineering, i.e. both the words to appear as exactly in the title. You can also choose the wildcard searching (right truncations) by choosing the INCLUDE option. However, please see to it that only a single word can be given in this case since it is going to perform a right truncation searching. For example, "elect*" will display the result sets with the titles wherein words like Electrical, Electricity, Electronic will all appear.

The searching strategies for all the databases are the same. The following is the list of major Union Catalogues, Union Lists, etc. of DELNET.

Interlibrary Loan (ILL) Regulations

A. Sharable Materials

1. Any type of library material, irrespective of format, which is needed by a member-library of DELNET for its bonafide user for reference, information, recreation, study, research, and instruction, can be borrowed from another member-library of DELNET. The lending library will determine whether the material can be provided keeping in view any regulations or restrictions.

B. Union Catalogues

2. DELNET facilitates the identification of materials that are available with its member-libraries.
3. To expedite identification of materials and promote resource sharing every member-library of DELNET will make efforts to catalogue its materials using international standards as adopted by DELNET and upload such records onto DELNET site for merging them into the Union Catalogues, Union Lists and other databases by DELNET.

C. Interlibrary Loan (ILL) Services

4. Interlibrary loan is a mechanism for resource sharing which member-libraries of DELNET have adopted for mutual benefit.
5. Each member-library of DELNET will actively promote among its library users ILL service.
6. Requested items, which are not included in DELNET union catalogues, should be cited completely and accurately by requesting library. The requests can be sent through email at sangs@delnet.ren.nic.in
7. When items cannot be verified and /or located it will be communicated back to the requesting library.

- In the link of UPLOAD LIBRARY RECORDS, DELNET Member Institute can upload their data to merge their records in the Delnet Union catalogue online with the help of login & password provided by the Delnet.
